Jeremiah 29: 11-13- Then shall ye call upon me, and ye shall go and pray unto me, and I will harken unto you. And ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart.

The Journey Begins

Part One

When we are searching outside ourselves for what we need, we are caught up in running away from who and what we really are. We may waste our energy by thinking we are not such a good person and we overly criticize our mistakes and faults. We are our worst critic but we see hope in being spirituality transformed into what we would like to be. So we begin our quest for truth to become this ideal human being, hoping (our idea of) God will allow us to enter His wonderful Kingdom of peace and love.

Our thought processes keep us looking for answers. We have to learn the truth or we won't make it out of here! Remember King Author's search for the holy grail? After traveling across the world for many years, he came home to find his family and his kingdom in shambles. Did he realize at the end of his journey that the holy grail was always within himself, in his own back yard so to speak, neglected for many fruitless years of searching for an elusive idea.

We work hard at searching and questioning, trying to become enlightened at some point, but after many years, what did I learn? I began to feel that everything in this world is not what we think it is, but one idea after another to lead us off in different directions! When I bravely and truly (hopefully) let go of my pre-conceived ideas and beliefs that continually kept changing, truth finally began seeping in around the corners of my faulty ideas.

At first, I saw a multitude of ideas, thoughts and beliefs everywhere, ranging from crazy and interesting to amazingly cool. Overwhelmed, I felt it would take forever to sort out the truths or falseness of them. This was even more than my far ranging mind could handle as a challenge, so I decided to give up.

Fortunately, I fell into the safety net of basic common sense and logic. There is a saying that the simplest solution is usually the right one. This decided me to began my new endeavor...instead of searching for truth out there, I would start literally at ground level in my own backyard. I would keep it as simple and common sense wise as I possibly could with honest (for me) conclusions, no matter what anybody might think about them.

In my first challenge, I saw myself standing on the ground, under the trees in my yard, looking up at the sky. Closing my eyes, I heard the song of a bird and the sound that a squirrel makes as it scurries across the driveway. This is true and real to my senses. I can feel the solid earth beneath my feet, view the branches of the trees, bare now from autumns gusts of wind, hear the little creature scuttling in the fallen leaves and the answering whistles as the birds above send messages to each other. Isn't this more real than an idea, no matter how lofty the idea is? When did we decide to question the reality of ourselves and nature itself for the thoughts and ideas of the mind? These thoughts and ideas are only contemplations and conclusions of what might be possible, yet we give them more credibility than our own physical connection to our earthly home which must be the basic ground work before any thought or theory.

I began with what I see around me, what my world is made of and it is very simple and easy to understand. It is exactly what we see and feel. We don't need to study science to know what the ground is, or what the sky is or the trees and animals etc. or even ourselves. There is an inner knowing that we are what we see, hear, feel and experience. Why do we need science or religion to prove that to us? Why are we afraid to accept our natural world at face value and trust that we, ourselves have the ability to know what it is?

Even a child knows what it is but we need experts to tell us everything we already know within our own intelligence and experience.

We are the experts at knowing ourselves and our world, what is real and what isn't. I remember feeling uncomfortably ill at ease trying to make myself believe, like some spiritual groups teach, that I don't actually have an identity and my name is not relevant ...that my identity, name and body are throw-aways, that when I die I will come back, memory wiped and in the body and identity of somebody else. They say that it is our ego that holds on to the idea of our own personal reality. However, that too is only an idea some people believe. No matter how many nde's I've heard about or people remembering their past lives, to me, reincarnation is really very illogical when you get into all the details that don't make sense.

. Most of us believe what we choose to, rather than digging into the facts presented. It is my choice to believe in the reality of nature, and myself as a valid human being instead of the confusing idea of reincarnation. I am more concerned about who I am and how I honestly represent myself and the validity of all of my unique aspects as a physical and spiritual being instead of how many hundreds of past lives I've had! Basically, this religious idea comes from India where they may still believe that you can never get out of whatever cast you are born into. It is your sacred incarnation to be poor or sick etc. so it's okay for wealthier people to abuse you and look down on you because it's your karmic duty this lifetime! What a good way to keep the 'lower' people resigned to their misery! I see many problems with the reincarnation idea but this the worst of them.

One more thing to mention, the 'controlling powers that be' already negate our validity as independent human beings. They give us a number when we're born while our parents give us a name and personalize our existence. We must follow the laws of these powers that be, even when they are corrupt. We must allow unborn babies to be aborted because it is the law. They want us to obey their rules of speech as well as demand we take untested vaccinations that may harm us! Now we're even told that we're not really male or female at birth and can choose our own gender (or something like that).

If we don't accept our own identity or reality in this world and honor ourselves and others as valid just as we are, that's a step in the right direction for those controllers. If we have no sense of worth in who we are, it only enhances their control over us. We wouldn't even have a sense of our own power foundation with which to begin a search for truth if we don't honor our very existence! I believe it is just as dishonoring to our Creator to say we have been a multitude of personalities, or we're created by some alien race on another planet, as to say we crawled out of the mud and began evolving for millions of years until...viola! We became a consciously aware human being ...of course, after we were an ape for a few thousand years! The latest theory, they say is proven scientifically, is that our DNA was tampered with by aliens and we were made into humans with conscious awareness from the ape's DNA strand added to ours (or something like that) and some believe this theory as fact.

So, who and what am I? Simple ...I am a human being because I am conscious, able to be aware and comprehend and relate with nature and other human beings. I have a name, a family and a personal living space. No one can say that I don't exist. We all exist because we relate with each other through our senses, therefore we know each other. I have already proved to myself that there has to be a Creator because I have a beginning to my physical body. I know I am made in the likeness of the one who created me, which means I also am an intelligent life-force and have the possibility to grow up to become like my Creator and be one myself. Common sense and simplicity assures me that I am not 'the creator' but the child of the Creator who made me ..and nature itself shows me that like produces like because I am not my earthly father either but am his child.

These conclusions logically pass all my simple common sense tests. I am ready to move on to the next challenge. Why am I here?

Knowing without a doubt that we exist within this world of nature along with lots and lots of other people, we would like to understand what we are here for. Why did the Creator put us in this physical dimension rather than somewhere else? Is this world a place of testing and for our growth to become more loving and kind human beings or are we trapped in here by an evil enemy and need to learn through our suffering what to do to get out of here? ...or maybe both. Does nature give us a clue to this dilemma or is there even a simple answer? It has perplexed our human minds for centuries and, as usual, there are many ideas proposed for what it might be, especially in a religious format. So, what could be an answer from simple common sense? Humm...

My simple answer is that we were born here ...but why were we born here? Because the Creator built a multi-dimensional world to grow us up in. Just like our earthly parents set up a home to raise us in, so our Heavenly Creator did also, (As above...so below) only He made it multi-dimensional because we were created with many aspects, some of which are not physical and each aspect needs its own dimensional compatibility. An example is that we can't live in water like a fish because we will drown without compatibility with that dimension, likewise the fish can't breathe air and live, they will suffocate in our dimension. So, if we have the possibility of a future of exploring and learning in many dimensional realities, our Creator would have to instill in us the ability to be compatible within their laws of existence.

We are the experts in our world, so we don't need to follow other's beliefs on this. We can use our own intuition and inner guidance to observe nature and come to our own conclusions as to truth. I know within myself why I am here. I belong here and I am a child of the earth as well as a child of spirit. I have consciously experienced a few other dimensions but I believe there are many more. Someday, my physical self and higher self will merge into my new body of light and I will be grown up enough to explore these other places as well as always have my earthly home base to come home for a visit. I just comfortably and simply know these things already although many others have very differing thoughts on that. No one told me about these ideas and some of them were within my own being since I was a child.

You may not agree but it passes my simplicity and common sense test!

Our one and only birth into this world is so simple and common sense wise that people can't even contemplate it. In all of nature, I've never seen an example of anything relating to the reincarnation idea. Through time, everything on earth changes and is recycled through chemical processes, but it is all in relation to the elements of earth. I see our birth here as it is in nature. Just as the animals, our individual self didn't exist before we were born, because we were part of the Spirit of the Creator. That's why we don't remember anything. Not because we have memory wipes and keep becoming somebody else over and over. We were forever in the mind of our Creator as a spirit, as He is first, then He used the elements of the earth to give us our human form.

Our Creator prepared us to enter this world of nature for our growth and development. He wanted to teach us about life in many ways that being a spirit in the great mind of our Creator couldn't show us. So we entered the physical, organic world to touch, feel and see, to express and experience so many more avenues of life. Our Father wanted us to learn it all, to be an essential part of the things we needed, to become like Himself. We could choose from the many possibilities and eventually return to Him as mature beings, ready for more experiences of a higher kind, beings He could trust to create worlds in a beautiful way, inspired from their own imagination.

He breathed His breath of life into us, which describes a baby's birth in our dimension. As soon as the baby is expelled from the womb, it gasps it's first breath of life from the Creator. As it leaves the growth process of the womb, it enters the physical earth dimension and needs to breathe oxygen every day of its life to exist in this world. In the story of Adam and Eve as the first people on earth, our Creator made a template so to speak, of the male and female to carry on the filling of the earth with human beings. This is a simple multiplication process through the years. Some people say there were already people here before hand and maybe they were. Maybe the creation stories got a little confused, tampered with, or mis-interpreted through the years but the basic premise is that they spread throughout the earth. We can clearly see that is true.

My test of simplicity and common sense passed!

What else can be said? We are here because the Creator established us in this multi-dimensional world to grow up as God-Kids! Why did things get so out of hand? What about evil? This is another difficult question for anyone to understand and there are many ideas out there on this subject. However, we can once again look to nature for simple answers. Think about earthly parents who want their child to have a happy, successful life but also want them to be able to handle difficulties they may encounter.

They will need the freedom to learn, not only from parental admonitions or examples, but also from learning experiences, what they need to look out for when on their own. They will make mistakes and sometimes have hard lessons but without the free will to make their own choices, they won't gain the necessary wisdom to grow and make better decisions as they go along. Sometimes they make really bad choices such as getting into drugs etc. which cause more confusion, making worse problems instead of moving in the direction the parents wish them to go.

Although the parents are broken-hearted as they watch the struggles that result from their child's mistakes, what do they do? They love their child very much and support them, but they also let them take the consequences for what they did. If they don't allow this, it may be harder on the child later because their wrong actions were not dealt with in the harsher way. As sad as this story is, the evil in the world has gone far beyond normal discipline.

The Creator admonishes us in like manner for our growth and learning. He developed the 'sowing and reaping process' in the Universal energy field so we would not get lost in our wrong directions but become aware of our mistakes and turn back to truth.

Everything in the physical world is based on a continuum or it wouldn't exist. We know if there is good, the other end of the continuum is evil just as light needs darkness to exist, sweet needs sour, man needs woman, and true needs false etc., the three dimensional world could not exist without opposites pulling each other to the middle. Anytime something goes too far past this central point, problems will follow. Nature always tries to maintain an equilibrium no matter what but human beings tend to upset it one way or another because of their free will to choose something that unbalances things.

The low end of this balance between good and evil has to be allowed for existence to continue. It is up to anyone to exercise this right of choice, no matter how badly it destroys the balance in the world. The Creator set up the universe to maintain the balance of good and evil by what the Bible calls 'the sowing and reaping process'. Other religions call it 'karma'. He does not control the sowing and reaping process but the laws He set up do. Energies which motivate people come back to them in like manner from the universal energy field containing everyone on earth's energies.

These energy co-relates are a response of the desires and actions of every human because we are all under these laws. When the continuum of good and evil becomes seriously unbalanced toward evil as it is right now, we can face serious consequences. This is why many spiritually oriented people are meditating and praying positive energy, day and night, into this field, working to restore this central balance.

The story of Noah and the flood is a reminder to us that we are in big trouble if evil takes over so much again. Maybe the rainbow was a sign it would not be a flood but it would be something else we would not want to experience either.

Maybe a flood of disastrous events to wake us up. Whatever it is, the universe is in control and it is no respecter of persons. There is set into the law that when evil moves to a certain point too low on the continuum, there will be an event or events to stop it. There are way too many signs to show this is where we are again. Technology has advanced far past human's wisdom to use it correctly. The story of Atlantis warns us that our time of reckoning may be way too close at hand.

This is my simple and common sense conclusion of why evil exists and why the Creator has to obey His own laws set into the universe. Maybe He is more like us than we can perceive and when He created us, He didn't know, but hoped it would never get this bad with the human race having to suffer so badly. Maybe He is also a broken hearted father wanting to come down and gather us all up in His arms and save us from the consequences of breaking the laws He initially set up to protect us. He does reach out to us to call on Him and when we do, He will help us if we choose to receive His help.

It seem as if learning about ourselves leads us into learning about our Creator. If we've only known Him through others' ideas of who and what He is, we are dependent on their way of thinking who or what He is, and that's how we will see Him too. We hear others blaming Him for evil but if we really knew Him, we would know He is incapable of causing evil. It's time to stop thinking of Him as some kind of parasitical, emotionless universal energy field watching us so He can somehow experience what we experience and get something from us and our experiences that He can't have otherwise. Not only does He already have everything, He is everything. It is beyond human comprehension to understand His knowledge and wisdom. An analogy of the difference between His knowledge and ours is, while we are but one tiny raindrop, He is the ocean into which the raindrop falls. We are the ones learning in His ocean, not Him learning in ours! What an ego trip to believe that He has to use us to experience and learn when every aspect of life is what He created.

Our Creator made an amazing world and designed it for us to enjoy. He wants nothing from us but our love, and to honor Him for His gift of life and follow his rules of the best way to live our lives in a friendly and sharing way with others.

When we look at our world, we may tend to see all the bad things the media makes so obvious and overlook the many friendly and kind people who are everywhere. We don't notice the good things because we are in such a hurry. Not enough time and too much to do. We're caught in a busyness cycle to outwit time but it can't be done. Time is always right around the corner waiting for us to catch up ...so anymore, we don't know very many people past our family and work associates. We may not even know the neighbor living next door in our apartment building. Common sense and simplicity tells us to get back to real relationship with others and get to know the Creator personally instead of trying to figure out what He is by everyone else's ideas.

Computers

We wonder, what is our world...a real physical place or a digital simulation or something else? I was wondering for awhile because there seemed to be some interesting possibilities in the simulation idea. So I thought, Could our world really be veiled over by a dark evil matrix? Could this technology become so sophisticated as to make us believe we are real within it? With chips in our brains and the enticements of many metaverse levels, will we forget the Creator and the true physical world and find everything we could possibly desire in a false digital illusion? Even our physical friends and loved ones as well as ourselves could be replaced with very real-appearing robotic people who we program ourselves how we want them to be. I can imagine many bodies, lying on their couches in tiny apartments, waking up out of the dream to eat, use the bathroom and get back in to their surreal metaverses as soon as possible. Maybe the belief that our body and identity is not real and our world is not real is just another psy-op to prepare us for the psuedo-reality of the metaverse.

No matter how much we want it to be true, digital objects and their components will never become viable, living entities like we are. They are artificially made with artificial parts and they are not organic and can never be organic. Just like a fish can never live outside its watery domain, digital must stay in its mechanical and digital dimension and so must the living, organics of our natural world of nature stay in theirs. They can make a digital based simulation seem as real as being in a real world because they are experts at imaging and effects, but they will never in any viable way, mix organic and digital parts to actually act within each other like organic organisms do within themselves.

When we are born into this world, the first thing we experience is the breath of life from the Creator but digital objects can't ever take that first breath. Because the Creator is love itself, in all its aspects, He bestowed upon us His life and breath, with all the endless possibilities of experience and consciousness expansion. This physical dimension is the best world for the beginning of the process of eternal growth and the new and expanding possibilities ahead for his children. The simplicity, logic and common sense test is passed for sure in my estimation.

It is obviously seen that digital creation and organic creation are two different dimensions. To think of the Creator making a world which is organic from a digital based foundation seems like a strange and illogical combination. Humans are good at putting the cart before the horse. Some people view computers and the digital components of computer technology as something the Creator would use as His building blocks. Maybe we think that way because we can't come close to understanding all the aspects of how it was done in an organic, physical way. We keep trying to understand with big bangs and evolution theories and in any other way we can possibly think of, as long as the Creator is left out of it.

We think, because we have created computers therefore they could be the foundation of all existence. We imagine ourselves as avatars in a video game and, as our world has become addicted to digital screens of TV's, computers, phones etc., it's highly probable that we are digital people. We may be functioning according to the will of a digitally chipped, super-intelligent group of wealthy billionaire computer techs, somewhere up there, where they are never seen by us below, but everything in the life of the humans is affected by them.

Maybe the Creator gave us the knowledge of how to make computers so we could use them, not try to be them! I think it only takes a little bit of logic and common sense to see the difference. Our minds get deluded by feelings of grandeur as we imagine we are the creators of the universe... because what follows such a grand invention as the computer? ...that we are gods of course. The whole of existence is one big, multi-level video game and we created it! Enough said ...For the sake of simplicity and common sense as well as logic ...did not pass my test!

The next challenge for simplicity, common sense and logic is ... Who is responsible for the evil in the world? The Creator, humans or the devil, who we call Satan?

Who Created Evil?

If we know anything at all about our Creator, we know He is the author of all creativity, goodness, love and peace. He doesn't create evil or destroy anything. He doesn't judge, condemn or send anybody to eternal damnation. Just knowing there is love and kindness in the world proves that truth exists because they are truth within themselves. Common sense and simplicity says that evil and good can't be created together but must always stay on the side of their continuum that defines them. That's why there is a middle line of demarcation between them. If people need growth in lower worlds than the physical dimension, they are always presented with opportunities to change their ways. Asking for help from angelic beings, they can at any time start moving in a more positive direction. The Creator offers everyone eternal life and shows the way to receive it and enter His Kingdom.

A God of love would not harm or destroy any of His children. Nature shows us this, as a good and loving father would never harm or destroy their child. How much more is our Creator good and loving to us than an earthly father is? Both allow discipline which can be painful as to avert their child from harming themselves or others even more. He always offers the errant ones a way to come back home. Because of free will, It is up to them to accept it.

He allowed the pain, suffering and death of His first born Son because, Jesus, of His own free will and love for humanity, chose to go down to the earth dimension and break the bondage of evil and death that the people could not escape from on their own. Jesus became the one who shows the way by his own life, by his mission, death, resurrection and ascension. He was and is the door from which we leave the lower dimensions of growth and enter the higher Kingdom of his Father in Heaven. Jesus is how we get to see and personally know our Creator. When he was on earth, Jesus said he was the express image of the Father and that He and the Father were one. He said .."If you have seen me, you have seen the Father."

John 14: 6 -10 Jesus said to him, "I am the way, and the truth, and the life; no one comes to the Father but through Me."⁷ If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also: and from henceforth ye know him, and have seen him.

⁸ Philip saith unto him, Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us.

⁹ Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? he that hath seen me hath seen the Father; and how sayest thou then, Show us the Father?

¹⁰ Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works.

We need to know that Jesus is not God, but one with Him. Here is more scripture that plainly says this.

Hebrews 1-3 God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets,² Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds;³ Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high.

With new knowledge of dimensions and portals, it is easier than it used to be to understand how Jesus accomplished this saving of us. Jesus could enter the physical dimension because he was both physical and spiritual at the same time. When he was born into the world by a physical woman and was able to breathe, live and relate with others first hand, it was because he was now of flesh and blood. He was also still one with the Father and remained a higher form of being, which enabled him to use his spiritual powers in the physical world when necessary or helpful to others. This enabled him to show the people of the day that he was special, not just human, but human and divine at the same time and they could be like that too. He had become the 'firstfruits of many sons' in the evolvement of the man with woman toward becoming a being of new substance, a light being, like the Creator Himself.

Jesus's Birth - The Christmas story symbolizes the humbleness of his birth. He came to help us. He said he was a brother and a friend, not a king to lord over us and demand homage of some kind. He wanted us to give praise to the Father of all creation only, not himself.

Jesus's Death - The meaning of his death on the cross was for us to die to the old nature in us that loved the self-gratifying, selfish ways of the world ...to leave behind the physical way of seeing and doing things and become 'renewed' in the mind and become a spiritual oriented person. In this way, we could be prepared to enter the kingdom.

Jesus's Resurrection – When Jesus died and they put him in a tomb, he was dead physically for three days but his spirit, very much alive, went down to lower dimensions and he visited with those who were trapped in those levels also. He wanted them to know that there was a way out for them as well as those above, and if they truly desired it, the kingdom of the Creator was waiting for them to come home also. When he returned from the lower dimensions, he rested in the tomb. He let his body quietly renew itself as the higher spirit within him, and its connection to the Father, brought him back to physical life.

Jesus's Ascension – This is the happiest news for us. We can ascend as Jesus did. That's why Jesus called himself the door and no one could come to the Father except through the door he opens for them. He didn't say we had to believe a certain creed or do certain deeds or perform rituals of any kind. He himself is the portal (Christ Consciousness) that opens to another reality. If we follow him as the 'one who shows the way', we can leave this world through the portal that his death and resurrection opened. Each one of us is also a portal to their own world within and this was always the inheritance promised by the Creator to His children but no one understood when He tried to tell them. Jesus said he was the first of many sons and if we have desired above all else, to follow his 'way' to the Kingdom within, we are one of these sons and the door will open for us. ... He said that the last enemy to be destroyed is death! His resurrected body was transformed with, and into the energy of his light body when he ascended, His physical body was never found on earth.

Jesus ascended to the Father because His work was finished. If we have already accepted the death Jesus experienced for us, and we have died to the desires, enticements and demands of the physical world, we won't need to die again through physical death but we will walk through that portal freely.

But how did Jesus's death cause all this to happen? Jesus, as a physical being, could die like any other human but as he was a being of much higher spiritual form at the same time, he could at any moment, change anything or everything to his own benefit. When he accepted suffering and death upon his physical body without any resistance, he literally broke the system! Never, in his life on earth did he 'sow' anything that would bring back to him such circumstances as he endured, but the evil circumstances overcame him to much rejection, suffering and death of his physical body. The universe didn't know what to do because it was arranged for equal sowing and reaping, never un-deserved punishment, so it shut down.

Matt:27: 50-54 ⁵⁰ Jesus, when he had cried again with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost (spirit). ⁵¹ And, behold, the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent;

⁵³ And came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many.

⁵⁴ Now when the centurion, and they that were with him, watching Jesus, saw the earthquake, and those things that were done, they feared greatly, saying, Truly this was the Son of God.

In the moment of his death, the dimension of Heaven and the dimension of earth opened to each other and the physical dimension connected with the spiritual realm. For this one moment only, people saw their passed on loved ones and the angels appeared around them. The Bible says there were thunderings and lightnings and the heavens opened up and exposed themselves to those below. What no one but Jesus knew, was that the portal had opened between the two dimensions just long enough to fulfill the purpose he had come to earth to complete and that purpose was to make himself become that portal.

By the time the universe was restored to some of the order it had before, all quieted down and those who followed him began grieving his death. But the universe had lost some of its ability to be restored to former rules. The law of balance was broken for a moment, which allowed the milder form of evil to expand past the borders that had contained it. When before, it was only as painful as necessary for purposes of teaching the Creator's children when they needed it for their growth, now it expanded into the world with vicious intention to destroy,

Thus, dark energy was born and the beings who loved evil were able to begin their mission to control the physical world by creating a veil of illusion over it and fool the people into believing it was still their world. It was their goal to make their own kingdom within it and replace the true Creator with their own god Satan, who they secretly inserted into the old testament, inter-mixed with truths, so the people would be deceived. They scoffed at the mild disciplines of the Creator and sent severely adverse events to everyone and found satisfaction in harming people who did nothing to deserve it. And so it has progressed through many years to the uncomprehensible evil we have now..

Our Creator is not the author of dark evil but a milder form that is allowed for teaching, the same as an earthly father would discipline the errant child he loves. From the beginning, this less malignant form of evil worked in the background, always trying to make things worse than they were and disrupt people's lives in unpleasant ways. Because good needed bad as its counterpart to exist, the Creator used it to discipline and teach His children the penalties for ignoring the laws of the universe and made them stronger within as a result.

Jesus accomplished what needed to be done to eradicate evil by becoming the portal of escape to a higher dimensional reality, hidden behind the facade evil had created. There are some who have entered through that portal already but most of us die and go to a place suitable for more growth in a place somewhat like earth itself but much more beautiful and peaceful and where love abounds. Jesus said “In my Father’s house are many mansions”. Each person who dies goes to a place perfect for their continued growth possibilities according to their inner desires and intentions. As on earth, they are directed by the universal energy field to a place that matches their own true, desires. It is much easier for them to grow there than on earth, where so much evil abounds. This is where we go when we die and that’s why it is such a relief to many when they read about those who have returned from a ‘near death experience’ to tell their story.

Back on earth, today, everything is in turmoil. We are learning every day the falseness and lies we have been inundated with for so long. We question the validity of everything we used to believe was true. Everything is wrong, evil has become so dark that its demons lurk around every corner of our lives. Eventually we run into the blank wall of the veil or matrix of dark evil because we don’t know what to believe anymore. We want to find a way out of this world because it has become more than we can bear. If Jesus conquered evil, why is it still here and is worse than it ever has been before?

Is it ourselves that create the evil in our world? Common sense, logic and simplicity lead us to the answer to this question. No, we are the victims of evil entities who established the ‘dark evil’ world over the one which our Creator made for us. We have been deceived, manipulated, mind-controlled and abused by this evil but they will soon be removed from earth. The evidence for this is everywhere we look. The last book in the New Testament is the book of Revelations. It holds the secrets of the end of this age. All of the evil corruption in our world is now being ‘revealed’ which is the most obvious sign of this end-time.

The Spiritual Community Has Higher Work to Do

What makes the spiritual community so interesting, is that we are all in various levels of consciousness relating to what we can’t physically see, and have never been taught in a way that makes it all fit together, in what we feel is actual truth.

The physical world and everything in it and how it operates is not the center of our attention anymore. We have become attuned to searching for the truth we have tried to believe, but could no longer believe just because someone told us it was true or not true.

At some point in this search, we realize we must learn this real truth from within our own being. Somehow, all of the truths we need are there. So we start at the beginning of ourselves as innocent children, the beauty of nature we see all around us, and how we relate with other beings we have, as well as had, relationships with.

The way we go about this is different for each person. We each exist within a consciousness all our own. As we grow, we build our world from what we see, hear and feel from others through this individual conscious awareness of ourselves and everything outside of ourselves.

When we awaken to the idea that our consciousness' are all sharing a higher energy field, which is the universe, we realize that we are more than a physical body. We begin to see our body as only a part of what we are. Suddenly, we are not alone anymore and everyone we relate with is a part of who and what we are in this vast universal energy field.

In the physical world, we tried to get along with everyone as best we could, some doing it better or worse than others. We liked some people, loved some people, couldn't tolerate' others, and probably hated a few. However, when we became aware of our spiritual merging in the universe, (Our consciousnesses'are all one here), we knew we couldn't do it that way any longer.

We needed to stop weighing in on others religious ideas, theories and imaginations as wrong and we are 'more' right with ours than they are with theirs, but to see others as having a differing energy than our own. Energy is neutral and we make it of different form and shape by our relating with it in one way or another.

We are a mix of physical and spiritual aspects. How could we hide our dislike of another if, as soon as we expressed it in our mind, they picked it up in their mind? Maybe they weren't aware who it was but if they were tuned in to our energy, they would be drawn by that energy to whoever expressed that thought to them. If they were not aware of the universal life we live together, they would only feel the thought sent to them as depressing, negative or positive and uplifting in some way but not know who sent it and whether it was accidental or intentional.

However, it takes time for us spiritually minded people to realize this. Most of us who are 'awakened' are aware of others' thoughts toward us, but many don't like to think that our thoughts reach those we negated in some way.

Sometimes these thoughts enter our mind so quickly, we don't have time to kick them out. We judge and categorize people all the time. This is why it's a good idea to learn to control our thoughts to only think either 'no thoughts' or 'positive thoughts' about everyone we come in contact with. If we cultivate a 'goodwill feeling' toward everyone we meet, it's more likely to ensure good thoughts to be reciprocated.

Maybe the main reason for quick judgments is because we are too concerned about our own ideas being correct. Did we learn this at school? There is 'right' and 'wrong' everywhere in our school curriculum. If we don't have the 'correct' answer then we are 'wrong'. We won't get an 'A' on the test. By the time we are out of school and in the real world, we have a solid background of knowing the necessity of giving the right answers. So we have to evaluate things quickly and prove without doubt we are right in our premises's otherwise we might lose something important to us.

Sometimes the physical world demands more of us than we feel capable of performing, making it necessary to prove our 'rightness' above anything else. Even when it hurts our loved ones, we stand tall and demand that they surrender to our admonitions of 'rightness'. However, this rightness is not really a belief, it is a vague fear of failure in some way. The unconscious thought is: "If they are right then I am wrong ...conclusion: "I am a failure". I need to be right to feel right about myself ...therefore, I must control outcomes. It takes being right to convince ourselves we are capable of this control. However, this type of cyclic reasoning prevents us from having unconditional acceptance of others and can ruin our relationships.

The newly awakened being sees the difference between life in the physical and life in the spiritual. What mattered before, now has become something to eliminate. What never used to be considered, now has become paramount to receive. It is quite a shift.

Some of us find it hard to trust opening to the universe because, before we were aware of ourselves in it, we felt it was the Creator, Jesus, angels and spiritual guidance 'up there' only. In our physical mind, we thought, because they all love us unconditionally, we were safe in that love no matter how much we messed up. However, when we realize we can no longer feel comfortable in our aloneness and think anything we feel like and no one would ever know, it makes us consider what we want others to 'know' about us. Our ego shivers at the thought that everyone will see our shadows, mistakes and judgments. So wanting others to see us in a good light but also wanting ourselves to be real begins our more introspective search for how to control and change our mind and its contents.

This gathering of beings who resonate with the same intentions and ideals, yet are still growing and changing in the world, demonstrates the need to learn how to relate to each other in the higher minds and let the lower minds take a rest. This control project is difficult and doesn't hide our foibles much, (what you worry about and want to hide becomes obvious). Since this is hard to accomplish, it takes releasing it to our Creator to help us out. As we try to learn new ways to communicate openly, we realize the importance of being in one accord with our own higher self. Our lower, physical mind doesn't need to be in control anymore because all it does is worry about what others may think of it. We are used to acting how we think we should to make the right impression.

This shift to our higher self is a first step to true unconditional love and acceptance of others. Since our lower self is incapable of this, it is imperative to dismiss its contributions to our thoughts. When we allow an empty space within our mind for the higher self to connect with our lower self, the lower mind concedes its rule and a new, combined mind is formed. "...be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind."

Some of us have also kept personal spiritual experiences to ourselves and we don't want to share more deeply with others, not liking the idea of being transparent. However, I believe we can get past ourselves and many have already, to find that unconditional love. This brings us closer to the Creator as He is the unconditional love within us. When we desire to change our comfortable habits and step out in faith, He will help us. We don't need continual preparation for what He calls us to do when we have all we need from within, and if we follow the leading of our inner guidance and helpers, we don't have to worry about outcomes.

It is amazing that when we are aware of this, together we can be a force to reckon with. A force powerful enough, when we send out our creative energy continually, to re-balance the world. People will then be able to continue developing spiritually and move on in the spiritual evolution of humankind. This higher energy frequency can be released all day to multiply as we function in our daily lives.

The enemy of truth and love is trying to stop this development of humans to become higher beings which is the next step in our spiritual and physical evolution. This is why the children, teenagers and young adults are targeted to be distracted from entering the spiritual path in so many ways, even ways we never heard of before. The world, once again, has been unbalanced by, not the amount, but by the depth of evil, and the evil beings want the younger generations to see their evil as the normal and enjoyable way of life, and in this way prevent them from growing spiritually.

There are so many more good human beings than evil oriented ones, but the depth of evil in the few has become too dark, even to brutal torture and unspeakable harm to babies and young children. Thieves, or murderers because of anger, or other crimes against society, can be tolerated and the perpetrators rehabilitated and they are a challenge for compassionate people who want to help them, but the crimes and horrendous acts of the dark evil ones must be totally eliminated out of all the dimensions of earth.

Their proliferation will continually worsen until dealt with by the universal law of reciprocation (the sowing and reaping process, karma) that will step in at a certain point and destroy it, as well as what caused it. Think of stories of Noah and the flood, Atlantis and on a smaller scale, the fall of the Roman empire.

This time, we have the power to destroy the whole world through nuclear war. However, the physical and spiritual dimensions are integral parts of each other and the Creator will not let this earth, with its many convoluted, necessary dimensional aspects, be destroyed. This world is to continue its evolvment for the benefit of nature itself, and the evolving human beings.

The Creator limited Himself in some ways when He developed the universe with laws that must be followed for specific purposes to be maintained. How can laws be valid if they are not honored by the Creator of them? This is why He established the laws in the universal energy field to be active in life's energy itself.

He developed it to be reciprocated between human beings, to keep the law completely neutral and never faltering because of emotions etc.. Then He opened it to all humanity to gauge and regulate their behavior according to their desires and subsequent actions. The universe became the perfect sowing and reaping process to never be influenced by anything but the truth of every desire and action of each and every individual human being.

Our Creator, though He is very much higher than us, is like us in spirit and has feelings and emotions as we do. It says in the Bible that if we have seen Jesus, we have seen the Father and Jesus had deep emotions and feelings. He shed tears and wasn't afraid to express his love to others or his anger at the lies being told by the religious leaders. It broke his heart to see the suffering of the people and he cried out to his Father many times to help him to endure what was coming, for them as well as himself.

Our Creator is so loving and kind that he didn't trust Himself to be neutral enough to allow some of the suffering directed back and forth through human interactions. When we blame the Creator for bad things that happen, we don't realize it is the people themselves that create their own problems and recycle them back and forth to each other, through this universal energy field.

It was only the dark, evil deeds that our Creator established a final law against, and it is explained in the Bible as Satan and those who, with their own free will, sold themselves to him, who will be thrown into the bottomless pit. Meaning an endless eternity of nothingness of whatever form that takes. These dark, evil beings and entities are the only ones prevented from ever having any part in the eternal creation again. All others have the ability to move forward if they have a true desire and intention to be a more loving person.

As those who are awakened accept each other unconditionally and join their consciousness in one intention, they will send out healing love over the physical world. There will be restored a resonance in the universal energy field that will cause dark evil to dissolve and disappear into the void of the bottomless pit along with those who willingly gave themselves over to it.

When this resonance is freed, it will move to the lower consciousness of others not yet awake because they were blocked from progressing by the dark evil practices against them. They will have freedom to resume their spiritual evolution and everyone on earth will experience an uplift from their feelings of despair, depression and lack of hope.

It's important to remember that there are two kinds of evil. One is dark evil of entities and humans who through their own free will gave themselves over to it and who desire and actually enjoy harming others in terrible ways. The other kind of evil is the common evil of humans who have had traumatic experiences, neglect or continual negative ideas pumped into their heads through the machinations of the dark evil and, understandably, become hurt and angry and do harmful things because of it. These are the only categories of evil that exist and once a human starts on either path, they can progress to depths of more of either. But for hurting and angry people who have lost their way because of this hopelessness, and who regret harmful deeds they have done against others, they will have ample opportunities and assistance to improve their lives and move on to better energies.

Without the dark evil, the world will be restored fully to its purpose of the evolution of humankind and the false veil of the darkest aspects of evil will be lifted. The purpose of this physical world can then be resumed, which is moving us toward becoming multidimensional light beings and learning to create as our Father, the Creator of all things teaches us to be. We are His kids and we were created in His likeness to grow up to be Creators too.

For those who doubt we have free will ...it is one of the first laws set up in our creation. Without free will there is no reason for the creation of this earth dimension where we can learn how to be a Creator as our spiritual Father is. We must have the ability to see all views and choose our own.

We must be able to choose good over evil and even choosing evil over good must be allowed. We have our own inner guidance and intuition that connects with our higher self which in biblical language is the Holy Spirit within us. Before Jesus left this dimension, he gave us this personal spirit of truth to find our way in the world so we would not be left trying to find our own way alone. It is having free will that lets us choose this path ... or not.

The search for truth never ends. We always learn new things, and as we do, it changes many aspects of our lives. I wrote this because I needed grounded in my basic beliefs. In this world, we can never know if what we believe is absolutely true. Many have differing beliefs they firmly stand on and it is egotistical and foolish to think 'I' am the one who has it right! When our guidance from higher places, our studies, experiences and inner guidance of intuition all resonate, we will find what is true for us. This doesn't mean we should stop searching but we should always ask for His guidance to receive more understanding and deeper truths.

I like Betty Eadie's story of joining all of the different churches she went to when she was spiritually growing so she would make sure not to miss the 'right one'!

We always have His help when we want to overcome judgmental attitudes. When we remove the control our physical mind has over us, we can stop being judgmental and let everyone have their own process of beliefs as they grow. I know mine have changed over and over throughout the years.

We can be like the river, ever flowing and never remaining the same but always moving into more revealed truth. Let's awaken to experience this river of consciousness that flows on to eternity, to that which we are truly meant to be and change our world back to its original purpose. There are many more souls waiting to be born here and begin their journey into life beyond spirit.

This ends my treatise on common sense, logic and the simplicity of understanding who we are and why we are here. Creator wins hands down! Dedicated to the praise, honor and admiration of our loving Creator and all He has done and continues to do for us! ..CJ Vett
